Work4Youth Publication Series No. 21 The report presents the highlights of the 2012 School-to-work Transition Survey run together with the National Statistical Service of the Republic of Armenia within the framework of the ILO Work4Youth Project. It provides an overview of the labour market in Armenia and an overall description of aspirations and life goals of young people, their educational achievement, the characteristics of young students and young workers, the unemployed youth population and youth who are outside the labour market for reasons other than studying. The study also outlines the national framework guiding youth employment in Armenia and presents policy implications that have been drawn from analyses of the survey.
