The SABER-WfD assessment results rate Timor-Leste's system at the emerging level in the functional dimensions of Strategic Framework and System Oversight and at the latent level in Service Delivery. These results show us a country where government leaders are committed to WfD and where significant efforts have been made to coordinate WfD policies with the country's strategic goals. The lower scores when we shift from strategy to implementation, particularly on the Service Delivery Dimension, indicate that while WfD is a high political priority in Timor-Leste, the system's capacity to deliver results remains weak.
