This guide is designed to provide practical advice to administrators and trainers in vocational training centres and vocational training programmes about how to include people with disabilities. Trainers and administrators must work together to make training environments inclusive for all and ideally they must also have the political commitment and the resources of a vocational training system to fully implement the practical advice offered. The guide also describes basic terms and concepts related to inclusion, some of which are part of international standards like ILO Conventions and the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (UNCRPD).
