The publication examines the supply and demand sides of the labor market to better understand the situation of today's young people and provides recommendations for potential programs and policies for Sierra Leone. The study is based on a labor demand survey and reviews skill development programs to enhance youth employability, based on a review of international best practices and of the main programs in Sierra Leone. The specific objectives of the study are fivefold: to understand the characteristics of young people in Sierra Leone, to examine the relation between young people and the labor market in Sierra Leone, to review the skill needs of the country's labor market, to analyze skill development programs to enhance the employability of young people, and to identify policy and program recommendations.
